EASTERN SOCIOLOGICAL SOCIETY PRESENTS

92nd Annual Meeting: Strategic Sites and Ways for Sociology to Fight Inequality and Injustice

March 10-13, 2022

Boston Park Plaza Hotel and University of Massachusetts

General Information

REGISTRATION

Hours: Thursday, 11:00 am-5:00 pm Saturday, 7:45 am-5:00 pm

Friday, 7:45 am - 5:00 pm. Sunday, 8:00 am-10:00 am.

Please take note of the following for registration:

- 1. When you register, you will be given a registration badge.
- 2. Badges are to be worn at all sessions and are required for admission to ESS events.

COPIES OF PAPERS

The ESS does not sell or distribute papers or abstracts. Please contact authors directly to obtain copies of papers or to get further information.

SESSION AND PAPER LENGTH

Sessions are scheduled with the expectation that presenters and discussants will take approximately 12-15 minutes to make their initial presentations. This will allow time for discussionamong the panelists and for audience participation. Sessions with six papers should plan on slightly less time to allow everyone time to present.

Presiders should end sessions promptly to enable the following sessions to start on time. If there is no Presider listed, please appoint one from the panel for time-keeping purposes.

Anti-Harassment Policy

ESS reminds everyone: Our Annual Meeting is convened for the purposes of professional development and scholarly educational interchange in the spirit of free inquiry and free expression. Harassment of colleagues, students, or other conference participants undermines the principle of equity at the heart of these professional fora and is inconsistentwith the principles of free inquiry and free expression. Consequently, harassment is considered by ESS to be a serious form of professional misconduct.

The following Anti-Harassment Policy outlines expectations for all those who attendor participate in ESS meetings. It reminds ESS meeting participants that all professional academic ethics and norms apply as standards of behavior and interaction at these meetings.

Purpose. ESS is committed to providing a safe and welcoming conference environment for all participants, free from harassment based on age, race, sex, ethnicity, national origin, religion, language, sexual orientation, gender identity or gender expression, disability, health conditions, socioeconomic status, marital status, domestic status, or parental status (hereafter, simply "harassment"). "Participant" in this policy refers to anyone present at ESS meetings, including staff, contractors, vendors, exhibitors, venue staff, ESS members, and all other attendees.

Expected Behavior. All participants at ESS meetings are expected to abide by this Anti-Harassment Policy in all meeting venues including ancillary events as well as official and unofficial social gatherings.

Follow the norms of professional respect that are necessary to promote the conditions forfree academic interchange.

If you witness potential harm to a conference participant, be proactive in helping to mitigateor avoid that harm.

Alert conference security personnel or law enforcement if you see a situation in whichsomeone might be in imminent physical danger.

Unacceptable Behavior. Harassment may consist of a single intense and severe act or of multiple persistent or pervasive acts which are demeaning, abusive, or offensive, or create ahostile professional or workplace environment. Harassment may include sexual solicitation, physical advance, or verbal or non-verbal conduct that is sexual in nature; it may also include threatening, intimidating, or hostile acts; circulation of written or graphic material that denigrates or shows hostility toward an individual or group; epithets, slurs, or negative stereotyping based on group identity.

Reporting. Attendees are encouraged to immediately report instances of harassment during the Annual Meeting to Jennifer McAdam, ESS Executive Officer at ess@wpunj.edu or at 973-720-3689. She will also be on-site. Reports will be treated as confidential. Violationsof this policy may lead to removal from the Annual Meeting.

Security at the Boston Park Plaza ("BPP") has a 24-hour operation desk. That number is 617-457-2308. The security supervisor on duty can generate a report.

The success of public sociology may come from below, but there are faculty and administrators who are evaluating our (public sociologists') work and scholarship and deciding if our work warrants tenure, promotion, or counts as legitimate scholarly productivity. Principles of public sociology—such as working collaboratively, establishing non-extractive connections with immediate communities, making work accessible to the public, and using sociology to address inequalities—can be problematic for evaluators who are unfamiliar with Sociology as a discipline and even less familiar with public sociology and for administrators who relationships with local elites who are vested in the status quo. The degree to which our work deviates from established academic norms and challenges the local power elite, I argue renders public sociologists vulnerable to criticism, marginalization, delegitimation.

39. Teaching the Sociology of Climate Change [Workshop/How to] Thursday | 3:30 pm-5:00 pm | ONLINE ONLY Workshops

Organizer: Andrew Szasz, University of California, Santa Cruz Presider: Andrew Szasz, University of California, Santa Cruz

We now understand that climate change is poised to become one of the greatest -- if not THE greatest -- issue for the future viability of global society. Certainly our current cohort of college students understand that; their concern and their fears are palpable and also reflected in opinion poll data. It is regrettable, but true, that we, as a profession, have lagged, have not kept up with the rapid growth of urgency about this threat. Interest in the environment, more generally, is still somewhat of a niche phenomenon in contemporary Sociology, and climate change garners only a small fraction of the attention that is devoted to society's interactions with nature. Nonetheless, there are signs of increasing interest. Climate is being taught in Intro classes (a bit), in Social Problems classes (maybe a bit more), and in Environmental Sociology classes (even more). One even hears of whole courses devoted to the Sociology of Climate Change. This workshop brings together faculty who already have experience teaching the sociology of climate change and faculty who are interested in doing so in future semesters.

61. Memoir as Sociological Analysis and Teaching Tool [Hybrid Online] [Workshop/How to] Friday | 10:15 am-11:45 am | BPP-Whittier

Organizer: Danielle Currier, Randolph College

Using two recent memoirs written by sociologists Deb Cohan and Mindy Fried, participants in this session will examine and discuss the many ways memoirs are valuable teaching tools in a variety of Sociology courses, which may include Sociology of Sex/Gender, Family, Intimate Violence, Aging, Qualitative Methods, Work, and more. Both memoirs (Welcome To Whoever We Are, Caring for Red) grapple with issues of complex family histories as they impact broader issues around gendered family dynamics and issues of care. The authors will include a brief presentation about the power of engaging readers through personal life stories framed by a sociological context. Four panelists will discuss ways they have either used – or plan to use – one or both books in their courses. Practical suggestions will be given for incorporating memoirs into coursework as well as how to use memoir writing as a learning strategy for students Participants are encouraged to come with additional examples of using memoir in their teaching.

Discussants:

- Deborah Cohan, University of South Carolina
- Mindy Fried, Arbor Consulting Partners
- Cristina Barmon, Central Connecticut State University
- Ashley Barr, State University of New York at Buffalo
- Danielle Currier, Randolph College

62. De-emphasizing Grades in Introduction to Sociology: Sharing a Simple "Choose Your Own Difficulty" design [Workshop/How to]

Friday | 10:15 am-11:45 am | ONLINE ONLY Workshops

Organizer: Matthew Manierre, Clarkson University

Pedagogical research has repeatedly found that traditional grading models often get in the way of student's learning. Rather than motivating students, they stifle creativity and risk taking, incentivizing students to simply say whatever they think the professor wants to hear. This is exacerbated by competition between courses that forces students to triage their energy and time, often leading to general education courses like introduction to sociology being low on their list of priorities This workshop provides a simple and flexible course design that reduces student's fixation on grades by allowing them to choose their own difficulty and corresponding workload. For example- a "master" difficulty student may need to pass 7 of 8 challenge opportunities throughout the semester, but they'll probably get an "A" in the course. Meanwhile, an "intermediate" difficulty selection means only turning in 5 challenge opportunities, getting a lower grade but freeing the student's time for their other courses without compromising their work in yours by spreading them too thinly. The use of multiple challenge opportunities throughout the semester open doors for creative assignments and opportunities to fill gaps in a textbook or lecture course. For instance: One challenge had students interview their family members about how their gender changed how they were raised. Another let students watch the film "Inside" by Bo Burnham via a Marxist lens, exploring how it articulates a sense of alienation and futurelessness under modern capitalism. Students were even challenged to make a children's story explaining the basics of intersectionality. Each of these challenges is graded on an accepted/not accepted basis, with rewrite opportunities if an assignment is needed. This frees the instructor to provide formative feedback and referrals to other resources because they no longer need to spend energy agonizing over rubrics or justifying why points were removed. Participants will come away with ideas about how to transition their course into a similar model, as well as an awareness of limitations. Course materials such as syllabi, challenge assignments, sample feedback to students, and student feedback on this course model will all be provided for attendees to guide their own decisions.

68. Talking Shop: The Illusion of Inclusion: [Talking Shop] Friday | 12:00 pm-1:30 pm | BPP-Berkeley

The dialogue will be based on two case studies of youth-serving organizations in the Providence, Rhode Island area. Organization One is a branch of a well-funded national community/recreation center. This branch is running federally funded school-age programs in a majority BIPOC community. This agency has a complicated history with race and is actively working to rebuild connections and trust in the community, at-large. Organization Two is an extremely small, grassroots non-profit originally founded by undergraduate students from Brown University. It is using a combination of private municipal and state grants, as well as an individual giving program, to fund its academic and leadership programs for majority BIPOC and low-income high school students. Discussants:

77. How AKD Can Energize Your Department [Workshop/How to] Friday | 12:00 pm-1:30 pm | BPP-Clarendon

Organizer: Jeffrey Chin, Le Moyne College

Do you have a chapter of Alpha Kappa Delta (the international honor society for sociology) at your institution? If not, come to this session to find out how to open a chapter. It's easy! Do you already have a chapter but were wondering how AKD can help get your students excited about sociology? We have a list of activities that our award-winning chapters (AKD Chapter of the Year) have performed.

78. Getting Real in the Classroom [Workshop/How to] Friday | 12:00 pm-1:30 pm | ONLINE ONLY Workshops

Organizer: Cherise Harris, Connecticut College

Instructors sometimes struggle with making sociological material real and relevant to their students' interests and lives. The panelists for this session are all contributors to the new editions of Getting Real About Race (3rd edition) and/ or Getting Real About Inequality (1st edition), published by SAGE. In this session, panelists discuss how they (1) reach students with timely topics, (2) navigate controversial topics in the classroom, and (3) devise exercises designed to extend course material to students' everyday lives. This will be an interactive session where we will invite the audience to share how they implement similar pedagogical strategies in their own classrooms. Discussants:

- Jennifer Rudolph, Connecticut College
- Julia Flagg, Connecticut College

Organizers: Brooke Harrington, Dartmouth College; Leonard Seabrooke, Copenhagen Business School From the era of Auguste Comte's early 19th century work on engineers, Sociology has been the disciplinary hub of research on professions and professionals. This session is for the diverse group of scholars and practitioners who have continued this work into the 21st century. The session will elicit diverse visions of the big questions in our field, as well as the practical challenges we face: such as bridging professions research across specialty silos (e.g., from medical sociology to economic sociology), obtaining research funding, and getting published. The goal of the session will be to share useful information and inspire collaborations or new research directions by bringing together a variety perspectives—including domestic and international, and from allied disciplines outside Sociology.

108. Community Engagement and its Role in Sociological Research [Online Only] [Presidential Panel] Saturday | 8:30 am-10:00 am | UMB-1100

Organizer: Margaret Vitullo, American Sociological Association

Presider: Douglas Hartmann, University of Minnesota

This session will focus on the ways that community-engaged research (CER) advances sociology in the current moment. Community engagement refers to collaborations between scholars in institutions of higher education and their various communities (local, regional/state, national, global) for the mutually beneficial exchange of knowledge, resources, research, and skills in a context of partnership and reciprocity. Leading sociologists working in the area will talk about the value of grounded, community-engaged work on topics that meet our society's current needs and speak to core and emerging issues in the discipline. It is intended to advance understandings of the practice and significance of CER within the discipline as well as to attract a new generation of sociologists to this unique and powerful approach.

Organizers: Michele Lee Kozimor, Elizabethtown College; Barbara Prince, Lebanon Valley College Presider: Michele Lee Kozimor, Elizabethtown College

Are you currently using innovative activities or pedagogy in the classroom? Have you thought about presenting such innovations at conferences or publishing the results of your assessments? Do you want to learn how to contribute to the scholarship of teaching and learning within the discipline of sociology? This workshop, led by the Editor and Deputy Editor of Teaching Sociology, will provide you with information on one key publication outlets for your work: Teaching Sociology (TS). In this workshop, we will discuss the differences in submission types, the materials that are published in TS, highlight the expectations for submissions, and provide opportunities for attendees to talk to others about their current projects. This workshop will be especially useful for meeting attendees who are presenting original work on pedagogy at the annual meeting.

160. Uncovering University Debt: Public Sociology How-To [Workshop/How to] Saturday | 3:30 pm-5:00 pm | UMB-2100

Organizer: Sofya Aptekar, CUNY School of Labor and Urban Studies Presider: Sofya Aptekar, CUNY School of Labor and Urban Studies

In this workshop, we explain how institutional debt works and the ways it exacerbates racialized inequality in higher education. We present materials to use to research and expose institutional debt, as well as strategies to organize on your campus and connect to university debt work across institutions. These tools can be used in the classroom and to build solidarity between faculty, staff, and students, who are often pitted against each other by university administration, yet are all negatively affected by institutional debt. Institutional debt research provides an opportunity to explore the role of cultural schemas around debt and morality in shaping individual and collective behavior – as well as to develop alternative visions for reparative and democratic universities. This workshop builds on a series of institutional debt workshops organized by Labor Notes' Public Higher Education Workers and the Debt Collective (https://labornotes.org/events/2021/how-debt-robs-us-and-how-take-what-stolen-back-campus-workers-organizing-against-debt) and a workshop at ASA 2021, and draws on increasing recognition of institutional debt in movements against higher ed austerity (e.g. https://www.aaup.org/JAF12/making-invisible-visible-organizing-against-instructionally-harmful-antidemocratic-effects#.YcNcEllOIPY, https://www.thenation.com/article/society/student-debt-university-credit/)
